Pre-conference Workshop Climate Change and Health (14th Feb 2019)

With the rise in manufacturing activities and human interference to the environment, world witnesses its outcome in the form of pollution and climate change. Global journey to a low carbon and climate resilient future will necessarily involve world of work and those who actually do the job. Employment in green jobs are in particular a part of solution to this climate change. In this process we are pleased to host a preconference workshop dedicated to climate change and health impacts to sensitize researchers of different fields to share views and experiences, to plan better strategies for shaping a better world for future. Nowadays, industries are working a lot towards environmental issues for protecting the surroundings and the health of workforce. A healthy workforce further adds to the rising of their business flagship.

This workshop will provide you to strengthen up your public relations, as this common platform will be shared by scholars, doctors, practitioners of occupational health, environmental science, ministry of health, labour, environment and forest, renewable energy, industry, mines, agriculture, HRD, law etc. The schedule for the workshop is as follows:
